The term 'Oxo-biodegradable' is a hybridisation of two words, oxidation and biodegradable. It clearly defines a two step process to degrade the polythene film and make it available for biodegradability within the environment when a bag has finished its useful life, usually within a set time period depending on the % added. 1% would trigger in around 6-8 months. The polythene film is manufactured from at least 25% post consumer waste and are also 100 % Oxo-biodegradable*.
